both comparative criticism and translation cross borders yet borders that have been crossed still exist even a border that has been dismantled is likely to reappear in a different place or as a less obvious set of limiting practices migrant texts and migrant ideas like migrant people may not achieve full citizenship in their new locations of course there is a creative aspect to borders too as postcolonial theory in particular has emphasized borders are contact zones generators of hybridity spaces of exchange cross fertilization and enrichment for all these reasons borders require minding thinking about managing even in a sense policing rather than celebrating the crossing of borders or dreaming of their abolition minding borders traces their troubling and yet generative resilience it explores how borders define as well as exclude protect as well as violate and nurture some identities while negating others the contributors range comparatively across geography politics cultural circulation creativity and the structuration of academic disciplines hoping that the analysis of borders in one domain may illuminate their workings in another whatever other form a border takes it is always also a border in the mind this book critically challenges the usual territorial understanding of borders by examining the often messy internal transborder ambiguous and in between spaces that co exist with traditional borders by considering those less visible aspects of borders the book develops an inclusive understanding of how contemporary borders are structured and how they influence human identity mobility and belonging the introduction and conclusion provide theoretical and contextual framing while chapters explore topics of global labor and refugees unrecognized states ethnic networks cyberspace transboundary resource conflicts and indigenous and religious spaces that rarely register on conventional maps or commonplace understandings of territory in the end the volume demonstrates that despite being invisible on most maps these borders have a very real material and tangible presence and consequences for those people who live within alongside and across them borders histories existences gender and beyond contends that borders are by definition lines of inclusion and exclusion established by the state it analyses how states construct borders and try to make them static and rigid and how bordered existences such as women migrant workers and victims of human trafficking destabilise the rigid constructs it explores the political conditions that have made borders problematic in post colonial south asia and how these borders have become regions of extreme control or violence
